

Youtube Channel goes live!

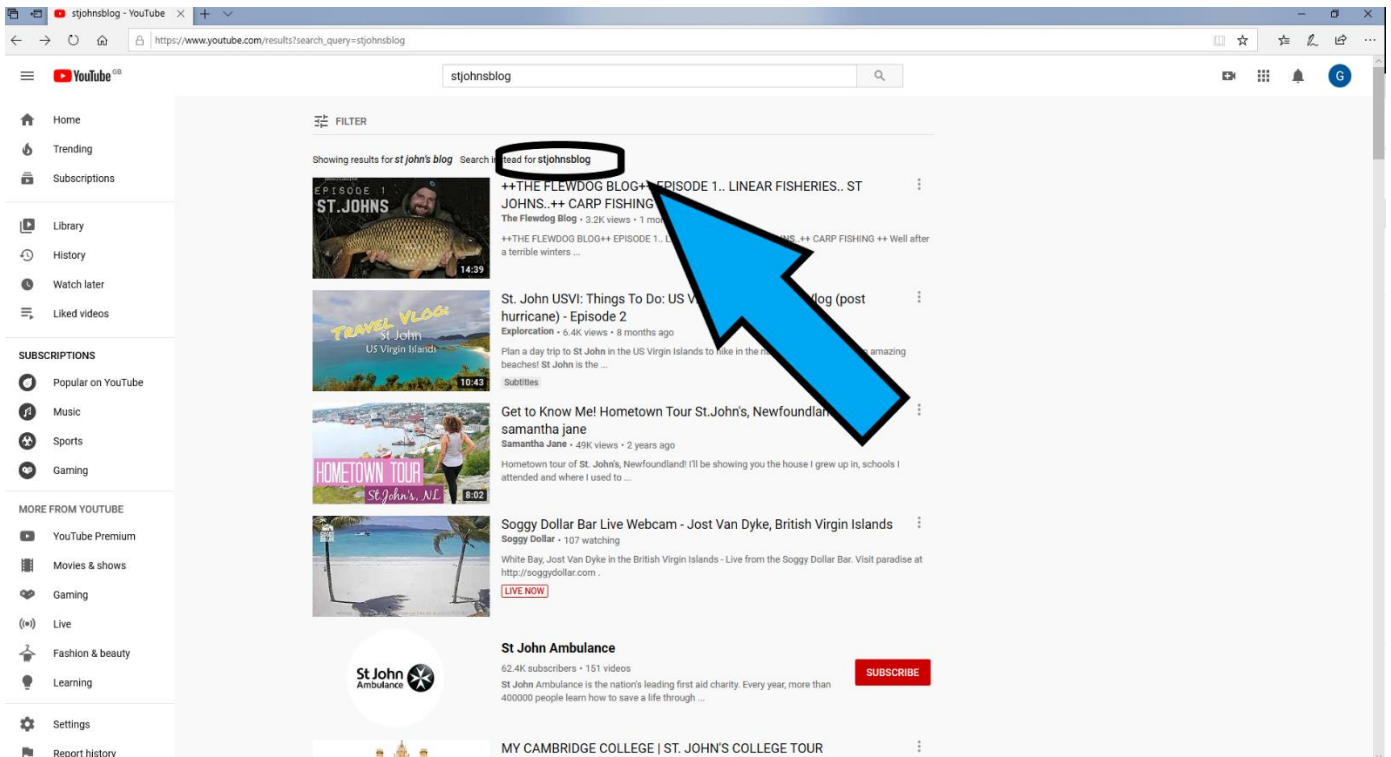

We have a Youtube channel which is now live. Youtube is different from Facebook. We will be using the channel to store all our content, allowing you to access it easily in one place without having to navigate around Facebook. On Sunday mornings you will still be able to watch Mass live at 10 on Facebook. It will be uploaded to the Youtube channel shortly after it has ended and should be available from 11am.

Go to www.youtube.com and, in the search bar which appears, type StJohnsBlog and hit return. Facebook will now show you some results. Sadly they show the results for St Johns Blog which seem to begin with a fisherman with a big carp!

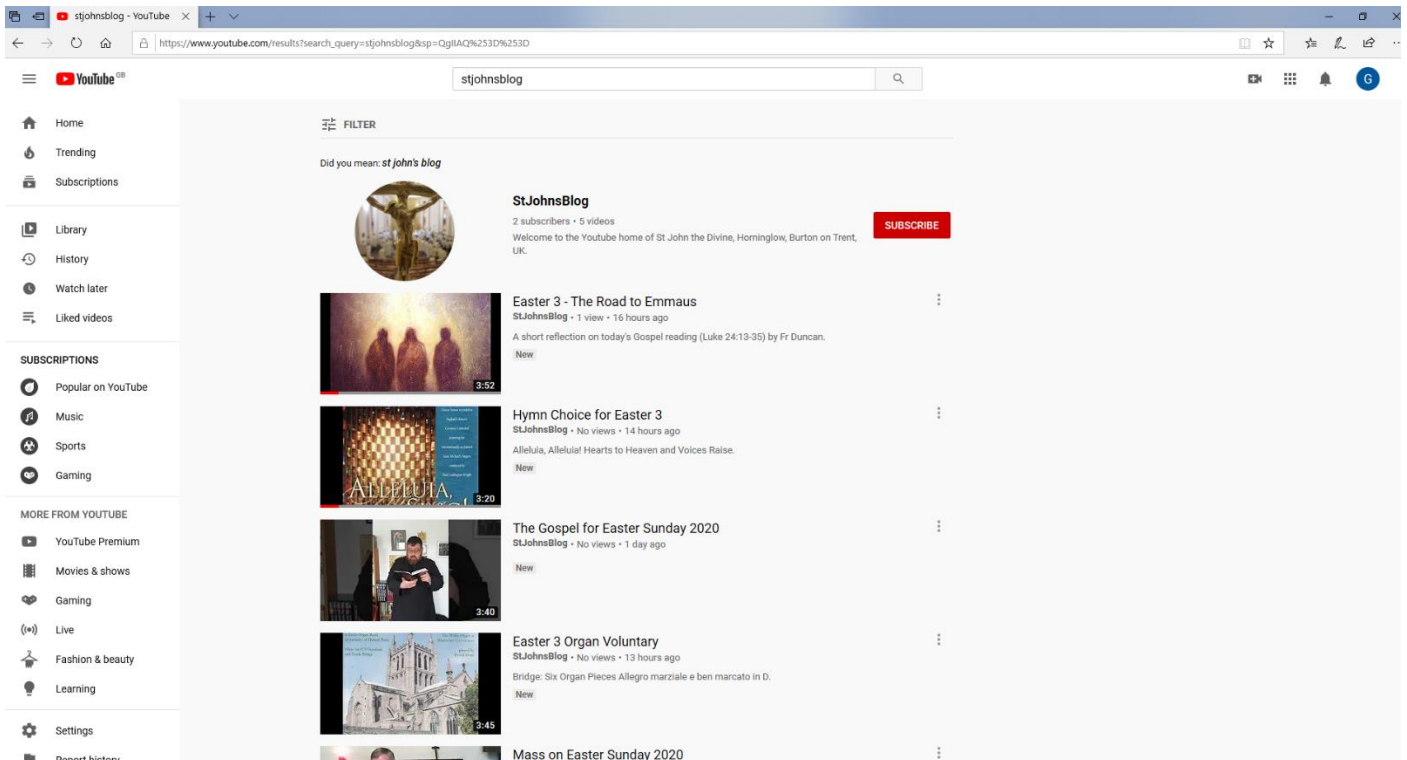

If you look immediately above him you will see some small text which states :

Showing results for st john's blog Search instead for stjohnsblog

If you click on the stjohnsblog link (the one with the big blue arrow pointing to it on the last image) you will now see:

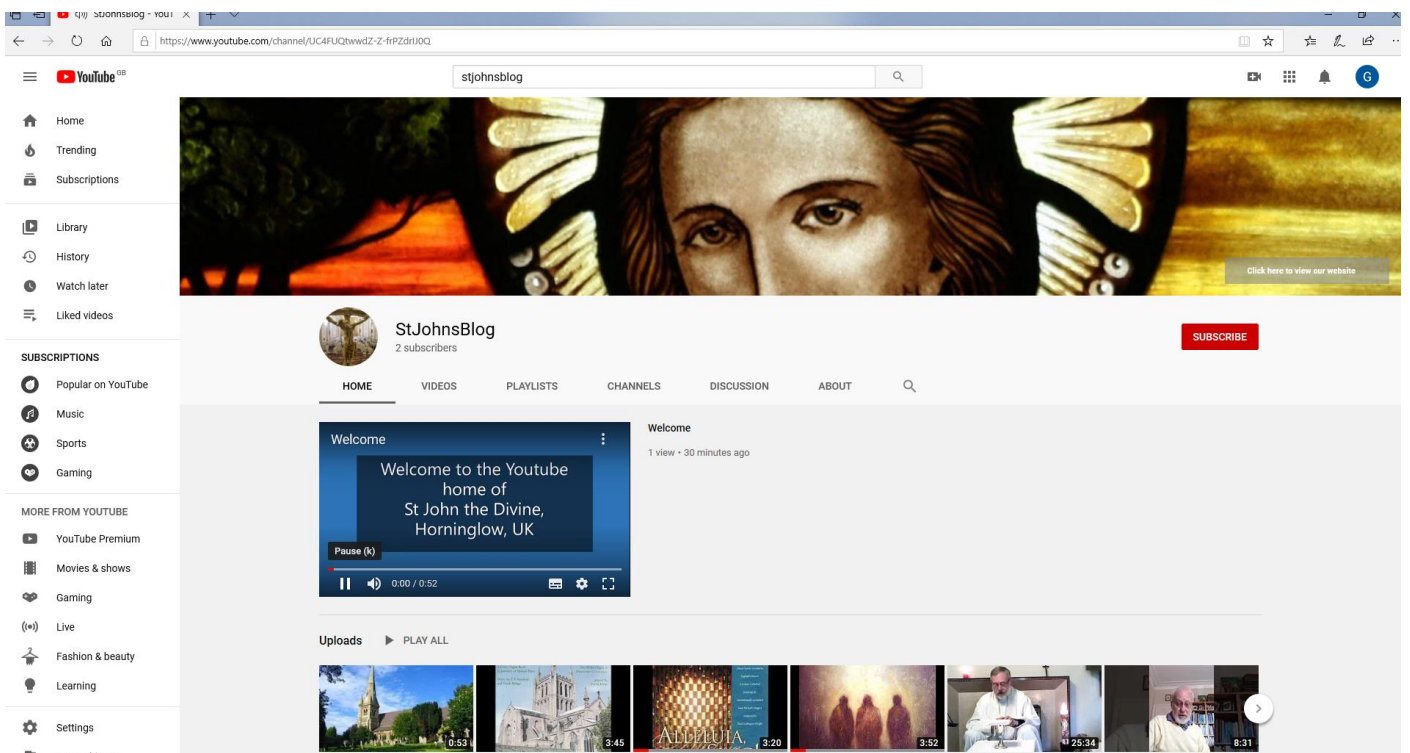

Follow the link to our channel by clicking on the image of the crucifix.

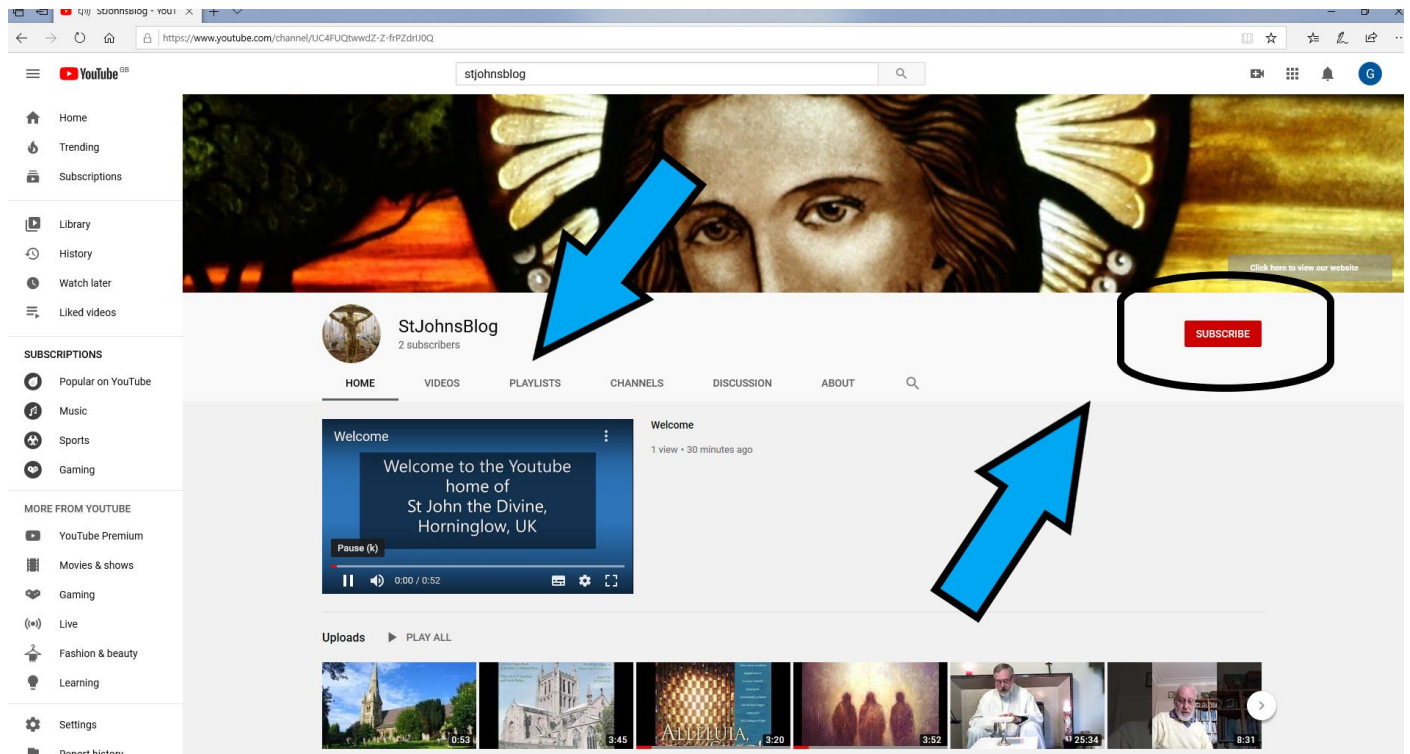

You will now find yourself on our Youtube channel.

If you switch the volume up on your computer you will hear me welcoming you to the channel and a short video will autoplay.

The front page of the channel will show the most recently uploaded videos and so I have used the playlist tab to organise them by date. Have a look around! Please also subscribe to the channel – it will make it far easier for you and will keep the channel live. Subscribing simply involves clicking the button. You do not need to supply any further information.

Good luck.
